

Alternative Views About the Recent Bombing of Japanese Tankers

By Robert O'Leary

Relations seem to be heating up in the Middle East, at the same time there are courageous individuals stepping forward to work to establish peace in the region. Yet, peace is not good business for warmongers. As consumers of news media, we are healthier with a complete “diet” of information. Just in case, you have only been feeding on the mainstream media menu in the last couple of days, we have some alternative videos below which may enrich you and make you more well-informed on this important and timely subject. Please let us know your thoughts, about this issue, in our comments section below.

We start with a video about the good news: Japan stepping up and talking directly with the leader of Iran to attempt to offer a brokering of peace in the Middle East:

The mainstream media (except Fox News) seems to have no problem with criticizing nearly everything the Trump Administration does and says, it is suspiciously non-critical of his foreign policy decisions when it comes to his actions against countries which do not go along with the NWO and banking interests (such as Syria, North Korea, and Iran). So, not surprisingly, the mainstream media seems to merely parrot whatever the Trump Administration seems to say about Iran.

Since the advent of the internet, more and more news viewers are aware that their governments are not always truthful, and that they will at times foster the occurrence of events, such as “false flag” events, in order to manipulate public sentiment to be in favor of policies which monied interests, or those of the so-called “Deep State.”

It is not surprising that Trumps current national security adviser, John Bolton, seems to be advocating a war with Iran. He was a part of the Project for the New American Century, which had in September, 2000, written the document, entitled “Rebuilding America’s Defenses: Strategies, Forces and Resources for a New Century,” which among other things advocated for “the subversion of any growth in political power of even close allies, and advocates “regime change” in China, North Korea, Libya, Syria, Iran and other countries.” Source: Profile: Project for the New American Century \(PNAC\)

And Pompeo has also been generally hawkish, in his foreign policy perspectives and policies, throughout his political career. The following videos speak to the reasonable questions around the timing of this latest incident, and the possibility that we may be dealing with a false flag. Above all, these videos seem to implicitly ask of such an alleged action by Iran is in the best interest of Iran, or if it is likely part of an agenda by other actors to serve there own political or global interests.

The president's perspective that Iran is behind this bombing has met with push back even in certain parts of the mainstream media. Wall Street Journal, earlier today, release an article, entitled, "Japanese ship owner contradicts U.S. account of how tanker was attacked." It stated, in pertinent part, as follows:

TOKYO – The owner of a Japanese tanker attacked in the Gulf of Oman offered a different account Friday of the nature of the attack than that provided by the United States.

Yutaka Katada, president of the Kokuka Sangyo shipping company, said the Filipino crew of the Kokuka Courageous tanker thought their vessel was hit by flying objects rather than a mine.

"The crew are saying it was hit with a flying object. They say something came flying toward them, then there was an explosion, then there was a hole in the vessel," he told reporters. "Then some crew witnessed a second shot."

Iran has pushed back, rejecting the U.S. Executive's view of the story, as demonstrated by the following video:

More will no doubt be revealed about this story in coming days. Stay tuned to your alternative as well as mainstream media outlets.
