In 18 US states, it’s legal to use recreational marijuana. The medicinal type, on the other hand, is permitted in 37 US states. Did you know about 94 million people in America acknowledge that they have used the drug at least once in their lifetime? Below, you’ll find the differences between medicinal and recreational marijuana.

THC and CBD

Recreational marijuana has more THC (tetrahydrocannabinol). This component causes psychoactive feelings to any user. It reacts to the brain receptors that control mood, pain, and even emotions.

When you consume recreational marijuana, you may experience dizziness, drowsiness, and confusion. The side effects may vary depending on the individual. Often, the user will either smoke it as a blunt or via a bong. You may also use a vape.
Medicinal marijuana, on the other hand, has more cannabidiol (CBD) in it. The mode of consumption varies with every patient. Some will put it under the tongue or inhale it via a vaporizer, while others prefer applying it on their skin as a lotion.

You may also chew it. Note that it may take from one to two hours to feel its effect. Expect bloodshot eyes, fast heartbeats, and a slight decrease in blood pressure as side reactions to the medication.

Legality

You need to be above 21 years to get access to recreational marijuana. Keep in mind that it has to be legalized in your state first. Showcase your documents like the driver’s license or the identification card to get the remedy.

You can even plant up to 28.5 grams. However, do not transport it outside your home; cultivate it indoors. You may be charged for planting it at a public place. Pick a sufficient growing space with ventilation for the crop to thrive. Do not forget to add high-quality lights.

To get medicinal marijuana, you need to attain at least 18 years. If you’re wondering, can I get it at a dispensary near me? The answer is yes. However, ensure that you have a medical card before checking it out. Its pricing will vary depending on your state. Often, it is presented in capsule form.

Be keen on the doctor’s prescription and strictly follow their diagnosis. Since its function is nourishment, the medicinal type is safer because of fewer toxins than the recreational one. You may even use it on children and pets. For pets, administer it twice a day for a specific time frame. Ensure that you feed it in the correct dosage—2mg/kg of your animal.

Taxing and Permit
Recreational marijuana has a 10 percent excise tax and a 5.5 percent sales tax on it. To some states, the taxation is calculated according to the THC content and weight. The medicinal one will only be subjected to a 7 percent total sales fee.

To get the medicinal license, you also need to showcase that you have assets worth $150,000 to $500,000. There are also state fees that you will pay to get a medical marijuana license. Ensure that you are familiar with your state laws to avoid any legal issues.

Tolerance

Although the drug is legal in some states, you may be fired for using recreational marijuana at your workplace. Being under the influence of the remedy may affect your work productivity. Get to understand your company policies before usage.

You can use medicinal marijuana, but you need to showcase the prescription to your employer. Be clear why you must use it during working hours.

Perks

Due to its psychoactive ability, recreational marijuana is used in leisure interactions. Individuals that consume the drug will enjoy candid conversations. It can also heighten your creativity. Some users will experience short-term happiness due to a release of dopamine.

Medicinal marijuana also helps in reducing anxiety to users. You can use it to manage seizures and pain. It has an anti-inflammatory property that reduces pain in the consumers. Other medicinal perks include:

- Inducing sleep in insomnia patients.
- Minimizing the effects of arthritis.
• Treating childhood epilepsy syndromes such as Dravet Syndrome and Lennox-Gastaut Syndrome.
• It is anti-carcinogenic.

Identify why you need the marijuana, then choose the perfect one for you. Note that abusing the drug will lead to serious side effects, so be strict on your usage. In case you have prolonged side effects, consult an expert as soon as possible.
