

CIA Document: “Using Psychic Powers to Break Needles & Make Them Whole Again”

In Brief

- The Facts: A document archived inside of the CIA’s electronic reading room shows that a person with gifted “paranormal” abilities was able to break/bend a needle, and then put it back together again without even touching it.
- Reflect On: How much do we not know about ourselves and our abilities? How much do we still have to discover? How much of that would change the way we perceive ourselves, our world, and the nature of reality?

If you go to the CIA's electronic reading room and type in "paranormal" in the search bar, you'll no doubt find some very interesting documents clearly indicating that people with 'paranormal' abilities are indeed real. There are many examples of people with all kinds of abilities, whether it be remote viewing (the ability to accurately describe a remote geographical location), the ability of gifted people and children able to transport a small object inside a closed container to another one that's outside of that container without touching it (breaking through spatial barriers), or the ability to write on a piece of paper inside of a closed container using nothing but the mind, without even touching the pen (parapsychological writing). These are a few of many examples we've written about over the past decade.

The document that pertains to this particular article comes from the CIA archive, approved for release in 2001 but the work was actually published in 1984 from what appears to be a journal titled, Research Into Human Paranormal Capabilities. The document was archived by the CIA and it's from China. It's one of a trove of documents archived by the CIA regarding China's research into paranormal phenomena.

Page 27 of the document outlines "an experiment using psychic powers to break needles and making them whole again."

There have already been several research reports on experiments on using psychic powers to bend iron and break wooden sticks and making them whole again. This article reports the results of an experiment conducted on using psychic powers to break needles and making them whole again in April of 1981.

In the experiment, the needles were placed in a sealed container, and the test subject (the person with paranormal abilities) was observed constantly by more than one person.

We selected at random a steel sewing needle of about 1mm in diameter. We used calipers to measure its total length. Then we broke the needle into two parts. We then measured the lengths L1 and L2. The person conducting the experiment kept L2, and L1 was used as the test object. After it was psychically broken, a magnifying glass was used to match up the break between L1 and L2, and the length was checked to make sure it was the same needle.

Researchers were able to observe that the L1 portion of the needle was broken psychically.

A picture below from the document shows the broken end of a number 4 needle magnified 50 times. Picture 2 shows the same broken end magnified 1,000 times. Results of the analysis show that a particular test object was pulled apart and not bent until broken. According to the document, "this result confirms the reality of breaking needles with psychic powers from yet another aspect."

In May of 1981, we used an electron scan microscope to analyze the seam of a needle that had been reformed with psychic powers. Picture 3 shows such a seam magnified 1,000 times. The results show that there is only the normal seam lines, and no signs of any welding. This is almost impossible to do using common methods.

We feel that the ability to break and reform needles is a psychic ability which objectively exists and that further research into this ability, especially into the process of the super-precision reforming, could have major theoretical and practical implications.

Electron Microscope Analysis of Broken and Reformed Needles:

1. Analysis of the break produced through psychic powers.

In May of 1981 we used an electron scanning microscope to analyze the break in the needle broken with psychic powers.

The Takeaway:

As the Chinese Institute of Atomic Energy pointed out in 1991, in a study archived by the CIA:

“Such phenomena and paranormal abilities of the human body are unimaginable for ordinary people. Nevertheless, they are really true.”

There are a number of examples of gifted people doing extraordinary things, things that are deemed impossible by mainstream academia. Perhaps what we believe about the nature of reality, or what we've been made to believe, prevents some minds from being open to such phenomenon, but the fact remains that it's been studied, observed, and documented at the highest levels of government for many years.

We live in an era where we use technological advancements to build weaponry, not to better the Earth and the human experience. In the same way, the psychic phenomenon seems to have been studied by governments for intelligence gathering purposes. These capabilities are not openly studied and resources aren't made widely available for people to learn. This is perhaps because we as a species are not ready for such realizations. We continue to be driven by greed, profit, fear, and ego. Until we shift our consciousness, the way we perceive ourselves and our world and recognize our deep interconnectedness with all life, until our world is governed by compassion, morals, and the desire for humanity and our planet to thrive, we will never be ready for such gifts. We must evolve, in a spiritual sense, in order to properly move forward. It's not our discoveries and developments that propel us forward, it's the consciousness that operates behind those discoveries and developments.
