Astrology Overview for November 06-12, 2017

The week begins with Mercury moving into Sagittarius on Monday. Mercury in Sagittarius is in detriment, meaning that a planet won't necessarily produce its best affects in a particular location. Furthermore it will also go through a retrograde, beginning on the 3rd December and therefore will last through to 10th of January 2017 in the sign of the Archer. This ten week period will also coincide with Mercury going alongside Saturn in the last week of November and the first week of December. So communication, which this planet rules, is likely to be fluid due to the mutability of Sagittarius, and issues of law and order, philosophy, fairness, world trade, and international relations could all be in the news or even strained. Facts are crucial but can also be illusive. However this week also sees Mercury broadly in semi-sextile, first with Venus and then also with Jupiter, so there can be some opportunities for expansion, and positivity.

Tuesday also sees Venus switch into the sign of Scorpio were obviously she is passionate, intense, potentially sensual here, but can also see transformation around our closest relationships or property and financial issues. All this is heightened hugely over the weekend as Venus goes alongside Jupiter, one of the most fortunate bringing aspects of all. This can also be very good for people's love lives, but we have to push ourselves outside of our comfort zones because there can be a tendency to be a bit too self-indulgent, or lack the drive to get things done. However, if you are lucky enough to meet someone for the first time it could be a relationship that can have a radical impact on your future.

Friday sees a Quarter Moon in Leo. Also a fixed sign like Scorpio. It's going to be important for us therefore to remain flexible, and not take fixed positions and also be conscious that if other people are enjoying some good fortune not to be envious about this, and find a balance between spending money in the careless pursuit of pleasure, against what's really sensible and wise.
