Astrology Overview for October 02-08, 2017

The week begins with the Sun, Mercury, and Jupiter for one last full week all in the sign of Libra. On the face of it this gives us an opportunity to try to reach better agreements and understandings with other people. And with Venus and Mars continuing to combine in Virgo, if we put our mind to helping people in practical and supportive ways there is every chance we can.

But Jupiter is opposed by the random influence of Uranus, and this aspect can create a degree of rebellion, outspokenness, and a more assertive vibe than would be thought to be to do with Libra. But we must always remember that this zodiac sign is Cardinal and therefore quite powerful, in a way which some people may not always appreciate. And Libra that is roused, can be just as feisty as a member of the opposite sign of Aries.

And that brings us to the Full Moon which occurs on Thursday. And the balance between doing what's right for other people and the diplomacy which often comes in the energy of Libra is challenged by the more forthright more self-possessed vibe of this Aries Full Moon.

Furthermore from Friday through to the end of the week, the Sun starts to clash with Pluto. But the interesting thing about all these influences is that they're all Cardinal, so the potential for power battles either within ourselves ironically about what we really want and are prepared to sacrifice to achieve, and the needs of other people can become really very potent. There may also be perceived issues around fairness and authority. So a resentment of authority or perhaps over use of authority. The Sun in Libra is about balance and fairness, whereas Capricorn the status quo and traditional power.
