Astrology Overview for October 23-29, 2017

The week begins with the Sun moving into Scorpio on Monday. He will spend the rest of this week alongside the brilliant, vibrant and expansive energies of Jupiter. This can be wonderful for very deep transformation in our lives, and if there are any changes that we've been actively contemplating they could now take place. This is also an opportunity to cooperate at a very profound level with another person, such as in a business partnership or even in a personal relationship. If you have a new relationship which has been going well this can be the week when the bond really solidifies.

Mercury is also going to be forging a beautiful link with Neptune. This combination can see us more attuned to people who are less fortunate. If you find yourself wanting to help a good cause, carry out some kind of charitable activity, or connect with the more spiritual side of your being, this can be a wonderful time of growth and heightened communications.

The traditional ruler of Scorpio is though ironically still in the sign of Libra where it is in detriment. However, it too is forging a great link with the Sun and Jupiter. As long as we carefully do our research, and look beyond the more superficial of situations, Mars adds fire to what we're trying to achieve – as long as we are mindful of ourselves as well as others, due to the fairness that the sign of Libra demands.

Friday sees a Quarter Moon in the Democratic sign of Aquarius. If we experience any kind of possessiveness, control or jealous tendencies from another close person, it's possible that we could find ourselves minded to break out and try to retain our independence of thought and action. Equally around group activities there is much greater chance of politics bubbling just beneath the surface.
