

White House Tells Governors to Get Ready to Vaccinate Young Kids, Even Though FDA Hasn't Approved It. Pediatrician Says, Not so Fast.

The White House on Tuesday told states to prepare to vaccinate children as young as 5 by early November, even though the U.S. Food and Drug Administration hasn't yet authorized Pfizer's COVID vaccine for children under 12, and despite safety concerns expressed by scientists and pediatricians.
#vaccinedangers #protectthechildren