

Zappos to Become Largest Company to Embrace a Self-Governing Structure

If all goes well, by the end of this year Tony Hsieh won't be the CEO of Zappos. In fact, he'll just be another employee, without a title. Zappos has been widely recognized for maintaining a thriving community culture within the company through it's emphasis on positive employee lifestyles.