

They Can See A “Stick Of Butter From Space” – The Billion Dollar Spy Agency You’ve Never Heard Of

The NGA works in conjunction with the U.S. Air Force to analyze the staggering amount of data collected through aerial surveillance abroad – mostly by unmanned aerial systems, such as drones with high-powered cameras. Revelations on the depth and breadth of the Central Intelligence Agency’s domestic capabilities, long believed out of its territory, was exposed by WikiLeaks Vault 7 recently to be on par with National Security Agency programs – so much so, analysts say it constitutes a duplicate Big Brother.
