

Comet Lander Re-establishes Radio Contact with Earth and Sends Data From Surface

The Philae lander on the distant comet 67P re-established radio contact with Earth on Friday night, downlinking yet another stream of science data. Everything expected from the little probe was delivered, just before low battery power dropped it into standby mode.