Types of Dogs

There are thousands of different dog breeds each with its own character traits. Some are small and snappy others large and cuddly. Some dogs shed a ton while others are nearly hairless. The first step to seeing which dogs fits me best is taking a quiz and asking yourself some deeper questions.

Are you a city slicker or more of a country traveler? If you love the high-rise life make sure your pup is up for long runs on pavement or curling up on a couch. Cities are great for pups who love people and action. Much like people, if you are not into bright lights and lots of things happening all at once you may be happier picking daisies with your country dog instead.

Exercise

Dogs like people need to exercise. A walk or jog is great but you can think outside the box as well. There are pups made for running across the snow or jumping in rivers and oceans for a splash. If you are happy at the end of frisbee or are more of a gym bunny, make sure your dog is up for your activity.

Dogs that love to run and leap can be found in the Pointer family.

Heading to the pool? Bring your Poodle or Golden Retriever for a fun time.
